

Off-Campus Student Teaching Opportunities

Students who desire a unique student teaching experience may want to consider a placement in an off-campus setting. A number of options are currently available and several more are under consideration. Hope's Education Department has already established programs in a number of locations including Chicago, Philadelphia, South Dakota and Liverpool. We have also recently established a relationship with the Department of Defense Dependents Schools (DoDDS) Student Teaching Program so that student teachers may opt to student teach in overseas settings as well.

ESTABLISHED PROGRAMS

Chicago Semester

Students who wish to student teach in an urban setting, may find the perfect opportunity in Chicago, Illinois. Hope College is part of a long-standing consortium of colleges that arranges for internships and student teaching placements in the heart of the city. Students may secure information about the Chicago Semester at: www.chicagosemester.org. Additional information may be obtained on Hope's campus in the Fried International Center or through Dr. Sander DeHaan (dehaan@hope.edu) in the Department of Modern and Classical Languages. Application procedures and information specific to Education Department requirements may be accessed at: <http://www.hope.edu/academic/education/studteach/ChicagoSemesterInformation.pdf>.

Philadelphia Center

Hope College administers the Philadelphia Center in the center of this historic city. Besides managing internships for a range of disciplines, the Philadelphia Center has recently added student teaching placements to its list of options. Students may secure information about the Philadelphia Center at: www.philactr.edu. Additional information may be obtained on Hope's campus in the Fried International Center or through several contacts on campus, including Jim Herrick-Communications (herrick@hope.edu), Pat Roehling-Psychology (roehling@hope.edu), Tom Smith-Management (smith@hope.edu), and Jon Huiskens-Registrar (huiskens@hope.edu). Application procedures and information specific to Education Department requirements may be accessed at:

Rosebud Indian Reservation, South Dakota

Hope's Education Department has a longstanding relationship with the Rosebud Indian Reservation in South Dakota. Besides offering May Term opportunities on the Reservation, some students may wish to experience life as a student teacher in this unique setting. Information about the May Term and student teaching may be obtained by contacting Susan Cherup (cherup@hope.edu) or Nancy Cook (ncook@hope.edu) in the Education Department. Application procedures and information specific to Education Department requirements are available at:

<http://www.hope.edu/academic/education/studteach/SouthDakotaStudentTeachingInfo.pdf> .

Liverpool, England

Liverpool Hope University has hosted Hope College student teachers for a number of years in a reciprocal exchange arrangement. Hope student teachers literally "trade places" with individuals from Liverpool Hope for the student teaching semester. Information about this opportunity is best obtained from Richard Mezeske (rmezeske@hope.edu). Application procedures and information specific to Education Department requirements will be made available at:

<http://www.hope.edu/academic/education/> .

PROGRAMS UNDER CONSIDERATION

Washington, D.C.

Hope's longstanding relationship with American University and possibilities for internships has prompted talks regarding possible student teaching placements there as well. If interested, the student teacher should contact Nancy Cook, Director of Student Teaching, (ncook@hope.edu) for additional information.
